If there ever was a combination appealing to the sporting instinct of a city, Hope has such a combination this year.

Ballots Missing When Ashley Box Is Finally Opened

Kitchens May Ask Cancelling of Entire Official County Vote

DESTROY INTEGRITY Parks to Probe Stevens Schoolhouse Box in Hempstead

HAMBURG, Ark.—When the boxes in which ballots cast in Ashley county were supposed to have been placed by election officials here Thursday, it was found that all had been tampered with.

The ballots were to have been examined in connection with the contest suit of Wade Kitchens, of Magnolia, against Congressman Timian B. Parks, of Camden. Parks, on the face of returns from the Seventh congressional district, was renominated.

No poll books or register of voters were found in any of the boxes. Tally sheets were found in the Milo and Montrose boxes. One certificate of returns, signed by the judges and clerk, was found in the Milo box. This showed that Kitchens received 54 votes and Parks 36, whereas the returns certified by the Central Committee showed the reverse—that Kitchens got 36 and Parks 54 votes. In the Portland box only a few votes were found. In the Cooler box there was only one ballot. In the Hickory Grove box there was only a lead pencil.

Keys Were Transposed In unlocking the boxes it was found that the key labeled for Cross Roads unlocked the Mount Zion box and the key to the Mount Zion box unlocked the Cross Roads box. Most of the envelopes supposed to have contained the ballots had been torn open.

Most of the boxes had been taken to the office of the county clerk and left there since the night of the election. A few were not delivered there until Friday or Saturday after the primary, it was said.

E. C. Aiken, secretary of the Democratic County Central Committee, on Monday after the election, in the absence of the county clerk, was reported to have procured the ballot boxes from the clerk's office, taken them to the office of an attorney in the courthouse, and with other members of the committee kept them there for several hours under lock and key. It was said the official count was made there and was announced immediately thereafter.

Mr. Aiken's Version

Mr. Aiken said that the ballot boxes were taken to the attorney's office after he had learned that one or more persons had sought to "get into them," and that while they were still in his custody, he and other members of the committee opened the boxes to ascertain whether all the tally sheets and other records were intact.

After the Central Committee had certified the results, Mr. Aiken said the boxes were returned to the vault in the county clerk's office and that the "tampering" was done by Mr. Aiken. "The door to the lawyer's office did not have a lock on it," he added.

Mr. Aiken said he feared efforts would be made to tamper with the ballots after an offer of $1,000 had been made to him to switch the votes. Mr. Aiken has been a member and secretary of the committee for several years. He was succeeded as a member of the Central Committee from Crossett at the last primary.

Says Integrity Destroyed

As the result of Thursday's disclosures, Kitchens attorneys will ask that the official Ashley county vote be "thrown out" and that as an alternative, they be given an opportunity to re-establish a correct vote when the contest hearing itself is held. As far as the congressional race is concerned, integrity of the vote has already been destroyed, they said.

Counter charges of fraud and misconduct will be made in Parks answer and cross-complaint to be filed at Hamburg in a few days. Parks has until September 28, or 10 days after he was served in the Kitchens' suit in which to file an answer. It is said that the Stephens Schoolhouse vote in Hempstead county particular will be attacked, and votes in other counties will be challenged. It was reported also that every box in the district will be opened for examination.

Textile Strike Is to End Saturday

Executive Group of Strikers Will Accept Mediation

Results of Special Survey Gratifying to Union Leaders

APPEAL BY F. D. R. President Points to Quick Ending of Industrial Walkout

WASHINGTON (AP)—Termination of the textile strike by Saturday at the latest was indicated here Friday as the executive council of the United Textile Workers met to act upon the report of the president's mediation board.

The leaders, well pleased with the report which they characterized as "an indictment of the mill owners," explained that the strike could be ended only by instructions from the executive council.

Roosevelt's Appeal

HYDE PARK, N. Y. (AP)—President Roosevelt Friday issued a personal appeal to the textile strikers and manufacturers to end immediately their general strike.

His statement backed up the same proposal made Thursday night by the special board of inquiry headed by Governor Winant of New Hampshire. It is believed the president stands ready to have the special board act as an arbitration committee should the strikers and manufacturers agree.

Mediation Plan

WASHINGTON (AP)—A plan for settling the great strike in the textile industry was proposed Thursday night by the Winant Mediation Board and given the authority of President Roosevelt's backing.

But at headquarters of the United Textile Workers it was said that until the U. T. W.'s Executive Council "decides otherwise" the strike will and must continue in full force.

The council will meet within 24 hours. The board's proposals call for creation of the textile relations board for the "more adequate protection of labor's rights under the collective bargaining and other labor provisions of the code."

A study by the Labor Department and the Federal Trade Commission to determine whether increased wages are economically feasible.

Regulation of the stretch-out—the practice of increasing the number of machines tended by individual workers—by a second board, acting under the textile labor board.

An investigation by the Labor Department to settle the question of differentials between minimum wages prescribed by the code and the compensation of skilled workers.

Francis J. Gorman, national strike leader, discussed the board's report with William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor. He called the executive meeting.

The board's report was presented to President Roosevelt at Hyde Park Thursday by Governor Winant of New Hampshire and Secretary Perkins, and a thorough discussion of the issues involved followed. Miss Perkins later said the president had "accepted" the report.

A foreword by the president accompanied publication of the report tonight. He said:

"The excellent report of the board of inquiry for the cotton textile industry presents findings and recommendations which cover the basic sources of difficulties, and does this in a way which shows the wholly fair and reasonable approach with which the board undertakes its task."

"It is, I think, a good example of the practical way in which industrial problems can be calmly discussed and solved under a republican form of government."

"It is, of course, greatly to be hoped that a fair solution can be had because of the good will and intelligence which undoubtedly exists in the industry as a whole including both the workers and plant owners."

Cotton farmers in Hempstead county whose production is over their normal level will be able to purchase additional tax exemption certificates through a national pool, under the provisions of a ruling issued by the secretary of Agriculture, Frank R.

1,346 Killed in Japanese Storm

Typoon Rakes West Central Area; Is Worst Since 1923

Land of Madame Butterfly Devastated by Catastrophe Rivaling Earthquake of 11 Years Ago

TOKYO, Japan. (AP)—At least 1,346 persons were killed and 4,200 injured by the typhoon which swept central and western Japan Friday, authoritative reports said late Friday afternoon as communication began to be restored.

TOKYO, Japan. (AP)—At least 850 were killed and more than 3,000 injured Friday by a typhoon which roared across western and central Japan.

Only a hazy picture of the full sweep of the destruction has yet reached Tokyo, since communications have been badly battered by the wind, which reached 120 miles an hour.

The casualties seemed to be centered at Osaka and Kyoto. Millions in property damage was estimated.

Worst Since 1923 'Quake' TOKYO, Japan. (AP)—A school building collapsed upon 500 small children in Kyoto during the disastrous typhoon which roared across central and eastern Japan Friday, and causing some 200 casualties, including many deaths, Regio, (Japanese) News Agency reports said today.

At least 20 persons were killed or injured near Kyoto when two passenger trains were overturned by the wind. A falling school house at Momoyama, near Kyoto, caused 10 known deaths.

Intruding seas inundated 2,000 houses in the village of Fukaka, near Kobe, and many were drowned. The blow struck at a velocity of 73 miles an hour.

Osaka police reported more than 100 killed there.

The newspaper, Asahi said it was the greatest national disaster since the 1923 earthquake.

State Completing Big Bond Discount

For 1 1/3 Millions Arkansas Buys in 2 Millions' Worth

LITTLE ROCK. (AP)—By Saturday night or Monday, the state, acting through Treasurer Roy V. Leonard, will have bought for $1,350,000 its own road district, highway and toll bridge bonds.

The State Refunding Board adopted a resolution authorizing Mr. Leonard to close the sales and to use all available funds for purchase of the first bonds tendered under a provision of the refunding law.

It was disclosed that $1,000,000 will be available to buy road district bonds and $300,000 to buy highway and toll bridge bonds. This amount is larger than was expected. The increase resulted from an opinion by the Attorney General that will permit use of revenue set aside from January to June of this year.

A second resolution adopted by the board named Bank Commissioner Marion Wesson, Assistant Attorney General Walter L. Pope, Mr. Leonard and J. Frank Beasley, supervisor of the Refunding Board as a committee to ascertain the amount of funds available to complete the bids and arrange details of buying the tendered bonds. Mr. Leonard and Secretary of State Ed F. McDonald were directed to return to New York tomorrow night to complete refunding of about $50,000,000 on highway and toll bridge bonds held there.

The board adjourned to Monday, October 1.

Extortion, Formal Charge Filed on Lindbergh Suspect

But Mystery of Child's Actual Murderer Remains Unsolved

$13,000 RECOVERED

This Amount Found in Garage of Hauptmann—Positively Identified

NEW YORK (AP)—A formal charge of extortion was entered Friday against Bruno Richard Hauptmann, carpenter, at whose home, $13,750 of the ransom money Charles A. Lindbergh paid for the return of his baby was found.

Immediately after the charge was filed Hauptmann, weary from his long questioning that began with his arrest Tuesday morning, was taken from the Bronx county courthouse to police headquarters, where he was placed in the lineup for further questioning.

There, Acting Chief Inspector John J. Sullivan, declared:

"We have a perfect extortion case against this man."

Sullivan added that the Lindbergh case is not yet completed by any means.

As Hauptmann appeared in the lineup he seemed greatly agitated and tottered as he walked to the stand supported by policemen.

The more sinister angle of the case appeared Friday to be unsolved—that is the actual kidnapping and murder of Baby Charles.

J. Edgar Hoover, Justice Department head, and Colonel Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the New Jersey state police, have not indicated whether they believe the ransom payment and the kidnapping-murder were the work of separate groups.

Mrs. Anna Kaupmann, wife of the man who is held, and his nephew, were released Friday. Police said they had "absolutely no connection with the case."

Chief Inspector Lewis Valentine was named Friday to succeed General John F. O'Ryan a few hours after the general announced his resignation. O'Ryan resigned at the end of his vacation but indicated that he would continue to hold office until the present phase of the Lindbergh case is cleared up.

Hauptmann was ordered held without bail until Monday by Magistrate Richard McKim in West Farms police court Friday when arraigned on a charge of extortion in the $50,000 Lindbergh ransom case.

From Trenton, N. J., a warrant for extradition, was issued by Governor Moore on a charge of homicide.

NEW YORK (AP)—The Lindbergh baby kidnapping case—the most sensational crime of modern times—nearly a solution with spectacular swiftness Thursday night after the arrest of a German fugitive and the recovery of part of the $50,000 ransom.

The prisoner, Bruno Richard Hauptmann, 35, an alien and a carpenter by trade, who entered his United States in 1923 as a stowaway on parole from a German prison.

His wife and nephew, Hans Mueller, also were held for questioning.

Writing Tally With Notes Justice Department officials disclosed with that on the ransom notes in the kidnapping.

His application for an automobile license in New York state in the summer of 1932 was used to check the notes, whose contents never have been made fully public.

In informed circles it was learned that the Justice Department felt that the kidnapping had been fully solved in Hauptmann's arrest. The department was said, had felt that one person alone—and he not a gangster—was the kidnaper. The belief was predicated upon the fact that most of the ransom money recovered was found in New York. Had gangsters been involved, the money would have been sent to other cities for distribution.

Money Found in Garage In the garage in the Hauptmann home in the Bronx—but a few miles from St. Raymond's cemetery where Dr. John F. Condon, the intermediary known as "Jasick" paid over $50,000 ransom for the baby later found dead—$13,750 of the ransom bills were discovered, cached in the floor and window sill.

Police Commissioner John F. O'Ryan made the announcement of

$50,000 Loot Seized in Morning Holdup of Manhattan Bank

NEW YORK (AP)—Gaining entrance through a skylight during the night bandits executed a well-planned holdup of the Corn Exchange Bank Friday, obtaining $50,000 in loot.

When the porter of the bank arrived in the morning the bandits slugged him, and as other employees arrived each was nabbed and herded into a room.

A special officer was disarmed and handcuffed.

Richard Rehehan, manager, was forced to open the vault and hand over the money.

Reward Is Raised for Dog-Poisoners

Total of $25 Offered for Identification of Poison Distributors

Additional rewards bringing the total to $25 were posted Friday for information leading to the arrest and conviction of dog-poisoners.

An attempt was made Thursday night to poison two bird dogs owned by Bert Keith, 319 South Shover, in the section of town where an unidentified man tossed poison meat into the yard of R. O. Bridwell, Tuesday night.

An analysis by Glen Durham, instructor of chemistry at the Hope High school, showed that the meat found in Mr. Keith's yard had been slit open and a portion of strychnine had been placed inside.

One of Mr. Keith's dogs ate part of the meat, but injections of hypodermics saved its life.

A dead bird dog was found Friday morning in a pasture in the southeast part of the city, apparently slain by poison. The dog had not been identified at noon.

Sinclair's Radical Plan Is Endorsed

California Democrats Okch Collective Use of Factories, Land

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—A platform embodying virtually all of Sinclair's EPIC program including the placing of unemployed men on idle farm lands and in defunct factories to produce the necessities of life, was adopted by the Democratic state convention here Thursday.

A shouting, cheering body of delegates, composed of party nominees, chosen in the recently primary election and other opposition had banded as radically Socialist, by a vote of 113 to 4.

Senator William G. McAdoo and George Creel, war time director of American propaganda and Roosevelt supporter, who was one of Sinclair's opponents in the primary election, were among those voting for the Sinclair platform.

Meantime the Socialist party, of which Sinclair was a leader for years, read the Democratic gubernatorial nominee out of that organization and the Republicans, also in state convention, heard speeches denouncing the Sinclair program as "spurious Utopia."

Intra-party opponents who had sought to alter Sinclair's plans in formulating the Platform Committee, were overruled 3 to 1 in the only skirmish of the convention.

Expressing confidence that Democracy would unite behind the leadership in the state, Sinclair said unofficially that "end poverty in California" program would be broadened into a movement to "end poverty in civilization."

The Democratic platform as reported says the deficit in California will be increased in the next biennium from $30,000,000 to $130,000,000.

During his campaign Sinclair said $100,000,000 would be required to finance his program designed to tend poverty in California. In order to erase this anticipated deficit the platform states that reforms in the tax structure of the state must be made.

The first step in this platform is the immediate repeal of the state sales tax. Other plans include an income tax on corporations and individuals and increases in bank and inheritance taxes.

Hammons-Coached Bobcats to Make First Appearance

Prospects Bright for Locals Against Hardest Schedule Ever

TO DEDICATE FIELD

Despite Illness Payne Will Play at Fullback—Brown at Quarter

The football season opens here Friday night with the Bobcats rulling as slight favorites to win over Hamburg High School.

Enthusiasm was running at a higher pitch than at the usual start of grid campaigns here, partly due to brighter prospects for a winning team, and the acquisition of Foy H. Hammons as coach.

The game Friday night marks the return of Coach Hammons to high school football after more than five years as a director of college athletics.

The season will be officially ushered in with the opening kickoff—8 p. m.

The new high school football stadium will be dedicated with short speeches by Dr. Don Smith and Steve Carrigan. The new grandstands have a seating capacity of approximately 2,000 spectators.

The Bobcat team sped smoothly through two workouts Thursday as Coach Hammons tested various line and backfield combinations.

The team may resort to any kind of an attack Friday night. The squad has been drilled on hard running plays for the past few days, but if the going gets hard, Peter Brown, veteran quarterback, may take to the air lanes in search of victory.

Brown is a triple threat back, and will do most of the team's punting and passing. On the receiving end, he has Jack Turner, veteran of three campaigns, and the lanky Kennedy and Anderson.

Payne Will Start Guy Payne, who led the Nashville High School team last season, as quarterback, will start Friday night despite a bad cold which has hampered him in practice the past three days. He will start in the fullback position.

Wingfield Stroud and Jack Turner will be starters at halfback positions. Stroud has shown much ability as a

Your Health

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Billions Spent on Recreation, But Little for Health

Economists tell us that no other country in the world spends as much money for recreation as do the people of the United States. More than $21,000,000,000, or one-fourth of the national income, is spent in this way.

The important items include about $5,000,000,000 spent on motoring for pleasure; $3,000,000,000 visiting and entertaining at restaurants; $2,000,000,000 on vacations and travel; $1,000,000,000 on motion pictures; $1,000,000,000 on light fiction and tabloids; $1,000,000,000 on radio, and $500,000,000 on theaters and lectures.

It is interesting that this compilation, for which Stuart Chase is responsible, fails to include the amount of money spent on sport. However, there are figures which show that people buy 40,000,000 admissions a year to baseball games; 10,000,000 admissions to football games a year, and 5,000,000 admissions a year to golf, tennis, boating and similar sports.

You can easily see that most of this recreation is not planned particularly in relationship to health, either mental or physical. There are occasional restful programs on the radio, but most radio entertainment is stimulating rather than rest producing and recreational.

There are occasional motion pictures which have recreational and restful values, but the majority of them deal with crimes, murder, sex conflicts and similar matters which are hardly restful.

I have spoken repeatedly in these columns about the fatiguing, rather than restful, character of most motor trips made in vacation periods. It would seem, from all of this material, that the American people need, taught the importance of restful and recreational activities in relationship to health.

For too many satisfy themselves with witnessing sports rather than participating in sports. The new movement towards shorter hours of work in industry means that the employment of leisure time is going to be a greater and greater problem for those interested in social activities.

It is necessary to teach the American people the recreational activities of the arts. In the current Century of Progress, the value of good music has been emphasized more than ever before in American history.

Dramatic performances in which amateurs participate are also beginning to gain adherents. Nature study and camping also are being developed on a wider scale than ever before.

The health values of such recreations can hardly be overestimated. In addition to developing new points of view, these activities are calling for a new type of profession—that of recreational leader.

Holds NRA Is Final Chapter in Old Era—Marxist Writer Says U. S. Is Nearing Communism

By BRUCE CATTON

There is blood on the moon, comrades, and things are going to be a great deal worse before they start to get better—and when the smoke clears away your old friend, the capitalist, is going to be occupying a glass cage right next to that of the dodo.

This is on the word of Lewis Corey, whose "Decline of American Capitalism" is a solid, intelligently argued presentation of the Marxian viewpoint on our present economic troubles.

Mr. Corey, to begin with, sees the New Deal and NRA as the closing phase of a dying era, rather than as the beginning of a new one. He finds it a prop to sustain a falling system—and, as such, he sees nothing good in it.

Capitalism, he says, must swing through recurrent booms and depressions. The rate at which profits increase must be faster than the rate at which wages increase; profits must be transformed into new capital, and so the land's productive capacity must forever be outstripping its consumptive capacity.

Heretofore, he continues, we have got out of depressions because capitalism itself was expanding. Today, however, capitalism is contracting. There are no frontiers to conquer, no new industries to develop, no foreign markets to exploit. Capitalism, as he sees it, must go on a diminishing scale henceforth—declining profits, lower wages and a progressive poorer

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Concentration Is Acquired by Training

Some persons work better in a crowd. Some work and think better alone. Training and the nature of the work decide, but the ability to concentrate is the keynote of all success regardless of conditions.

In a newspaper office dozens of typewriters are clacking at once, and the general hurry seems to conspire against all laws of production. But behold a miracle. Serious writers turn out copy like lightning, lost as completely in their work as though on islands surrounded by a deep and peaceful sea.

Ask any such person how they learned to keep their minds on their work amid such din. Invariably the answer is, "Oh, you just get used to it."

Have Learned to Concentrate
This is true, but it is not all. Somewhere in earlier life such people have learned to concentrate, to ignore noises or diversions. Concentration cannot become second nature in a newspaper office, a boiler factory, or at an afternoon tea, without his first training. It is learned during childhood in the quiet of one's room, or the silent family group that recognizes a child's right to put his mind on a given task and keep it there.

Once learned it sticks through life. Habit may change and environment may alter the necessity for solitude, but concentration must be ingrained in the individual at an early age.

This should be remembered by parents. The magic power is fostered in the beginning in an atmosphere of peace and quiet without interruption.

Every child who studies needs the setting for it. He needs a place of his own where every shred of brain power can be directed on the subject in hand and kept there. He will get used to certain household sounds, but they should not be of the type to shove themselves between the page and the mental eye. Particularly, they should not be tantalizing or calling on his will-power to resist. The radio—the smell of boiling taffy, games and much laughter—every one in the house having a good time but himself.

The new swimmer has to learn in calm water before he can brave the roaring deep. The child who has learned real concentration will adjust himself to conditions as they arise later on, if he has this magic of all magic to carry him through. It is vital that home conditions be conducive to real application, and that work impulse is allowed to carry on to a finish without temptations or compelling interruptions.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

New fall clothes are so slimly tailored, particularly about hips and the waistline, that a woman who is the least bit overweight isn't going to be flattered by them. You can't expect to wear a tunic dress or suit if your hips bulge, or a smooth-fitting evening gown if your stomach sticks out. Obviously then, if your figure is not all it should be, you'll have to get busy right now and do something about it.

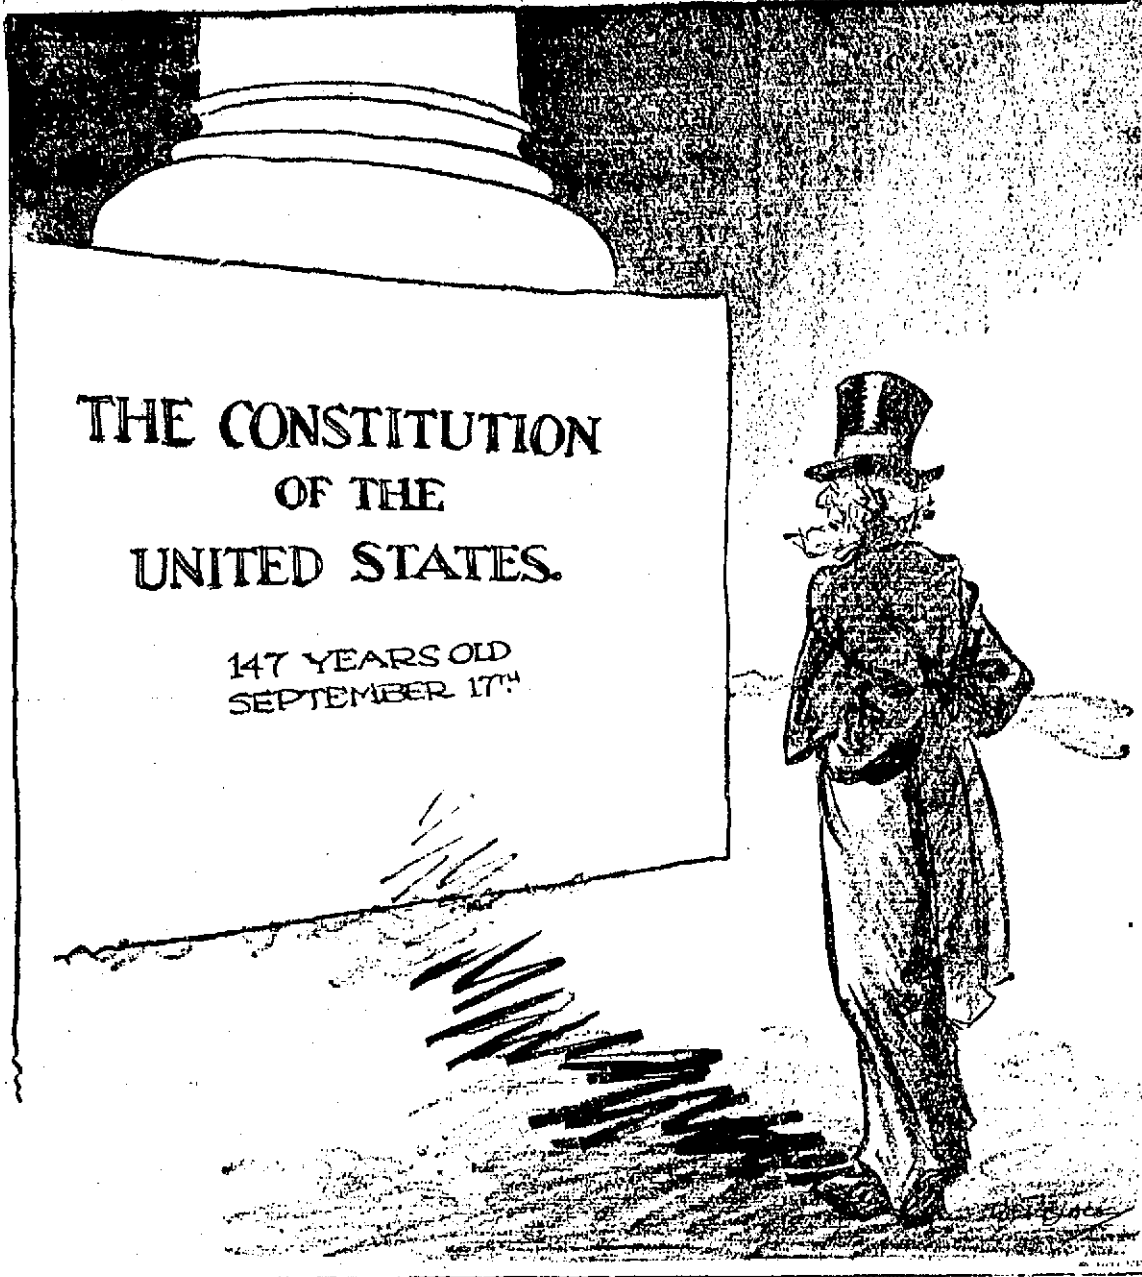

You'll probably decide on some sort of diet. Don't go on a rigid one unless your doctor advises it. Generally, speaking, it is far better to eat small portions of every kind of food than it is to cut out some foods entirely. You will have to do exercises too, of course. A diet will make you lose weight, but not always in the right places. Select exercises that you enjoy doing. Because of its simplicity, you probably will like that illustrated here, designed to reduce the waistline and make it supple.

Stand erect with heels together and hands on your hips. Lunge forward with the right leg, keeping the left foot flat on the floor and stretching the left arm forward in front of you. Keeping arms and legs in this position, twist the body to the right as far as it will go. Then swing it around to the left. Repeat ten times before returning the feet to the starting position.

Standard of Living.
And the upshot, says Mr. Corey, will be Communism.

BEGIN HERE TODAY.
BOOTS RAEBURN, 18 and pretty, blonde with BUSH LUNN, handsome swimming instructor. Boots goes to Miami, pretending to send for her sister, and Boots gets a job in a New York department store.

Boots does not write. Months pass and then word comes that he has been killed in a motorboat accident.

You good to ask her parents for help. Boots struggles on alone. She meets DENIS PENWAY, young author, who introduces her to EDWARD VAN SEIVER, and beautiful KAY CHILDRICH. Boots helps Boots get a job in a book shop. She goes to live with "CHAS" PENWAY, in charge of the shop. Boots' mother comes to see her and tells her her father had a stroke.

Boots calls one night and asks Boots if she is going to marry Edward. He takes her in his arms, then apologizes and rushes away.

KNOW ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXVIII

FOR Boots the world had become a beautiful place. Colors, sounds, scents all charmed her. She had waked to a sense of lightness and happiness. That night at the theater with Edward she had been so sweet, so infinitely gentle and womanly and interested that the big fellow had been enchanted with her. She seemed to burn with an inner light.

"You've grown up since I met you," he marveled. "You were just a kid last spring. . . ."

"I'm 20 now," she reminded him. "I've earned my living for more than a year. I've had a serious illness. You're noticing the scars—"

"Oh, that!" They were in his big, shining car now, homeward bound. He took her hand. "You've been putting me off for some time now. How about marrying me in December?"

But she could not answer Edward just then. True, Denis had walked out of her life last night with Kay's name on his lips. He had said, in effect, that he belonged to Kay and Kay to him. But Boots ignored this. She had the memory of that moment in Denis' arms. That, she argued, had "meant something." No, she was not really so grown up as Denis and Edward suspected. She had been singularly untouched by her brief experience with marriage. The very fact that Denis had crushed her to him she believed indicated some bond existed between them.

She went about in a sort of dream in which objects, people, places and time were only half-real. The only reality was a tall young man with a mocking smile on his lips. One of these days, she told herself, he would walk into her life to stay. Everything would be straightened out. Any moment now she might pass him on the street; that man stepping out of a taxi might be he. That tall person with his back turned to her in the restaurant might face suddenly about, revealing Denis' heart-breaking beautiful eyes.

MEANTIME it was pleasant to have Edward about, to listen to his conversation, to lean on his arm, to smile at him. It was pleasant to be admired, to be wanted; but presently she would have to explain to Edward just how things were with her. He wouldn't mind. He would be sure to understand. It was in this mood that she listened to his questions about an early marriage. December? No, she didn't think so. She smiled at him mistily and the square shouldered man smiled back at her protectively. Poor little kid, he thought. She mustn't be rushed into this. He must be patient. . . .

One blowy November week-end Boots went up to the house in Larchneck to see her parents. Her mother had written to say that her father was anxious to see her, although he wouldn't admit it for the world. Rather nervous about her reception, she had walked down to the big, shabby, shingled house. The forsythia whips drooped bare and disconsolate below the porch. There were a few scarlet hellebores on the hedge lining the walk. How strange it was to return and find everything just the same when one had been away so long!

She was a smart little figure in her brown tweed suit, a small brown felt set crisply on her fair head so that the curls on one side were fully exposed. She looked nothing at all like the proverbial prodigal daughter. The bag in her hand was of real pigskin—Edward's birthday gift to her. She had been sending part of her salary home each week since her mother's visit and against Mrs. Raeburn's protest. But Masterston was a generous employer, and Frances Gawtry's report of Boots had been flattering. She had had a raise since coming to the Bay Tree that rainy summer morning.

Miss Florida came to the door, welcoming her with embarrassed confusion. "You dear child! How well you look."

It was true and Boots was glad. There would be critical eyes to gaze at her from behind the chintz draperies all along the streets of the village. "Raeburn's girl who married badly, and whose husband died." She threw her head up proudly. Well, she had escaped from this narrowness and pettiness. She had done something, made something of herself. They wouldn't recognize this probably because working in a bookshop didn't sound impressive. But she could wave Edward Van Seiver's name in front of them any day now if she wanted to and that would impress them. Larchneck had heard of the Van Seivers and their big, blank-faced white stone house on upper Fifth avenue. Boots had gone there for tea the day before and Edward's corpulent, didactic mother had been polite to her; his sisters frankly curious and interested.

Meantime here was Miss Florida, her long loops of oily hair pinned back in the well remembered manner, greeting her. "Your mother's upstairs with your father. The furnace has been acting up," Miss Florida explained. "They have a little oil stove lighted in his room."

Boots had not remembered that the stair carpet was so shabby. Where the brass rods fitted it had frayed almost completely away. The wallpaper in the hall, too, was spotted and in places had pulled away from the plaster. There were evidences of decent poverty everywhere—in the mended curtains, in couch springs that sagged to the floor, Boots' heart sank as she saw the mother's dozen stairs comprising the second half of the flight.

She hadn't known, hadn't dreamed that things were like this! The house smelled of coal gas and dust. The room in which she stepped was wide and bare and shabby. The man sitting in the rocker, a bright afghan over his knees, differed in almost all respects from the heavy-jowled, ruddy father she had left behind a year and a half ago. He was smaller, thinner. He had a gray stubble of beard on his chin and his voice faltered when he spoke.

There was no awkwardness. That "Daddy" was "different." Boots was ready to acknowledge. The old thundering accents were gone; the old truculence had vanished. In its place was a new weakness, a humility which hurt her more than the other ever had. It was terrible to see the gaunt, gray, thin man—a pathetic shadow of his former self—deferring to everyone. It was pitiable beyond words.

BOOTS had not known things were like this. A terrible pity filled her heart, smote her very bones.

"I should have come before," she said later to Miss Florida, helping the latter with the evening meal.

"Well, ya. Your mother's been carrying a heavy load," Miss Florida admitted. "She's worried more than she will say. I know that."

Bit by bit when the invalid had been settled for the night and the two women were downstairs in the shabby living room, Boots drew from her mother the truth about the family finances. Taxes had gone up frightfully. Mrs. Raeburn said, twisting her thin fingers, nervously. The adroit policy had practically been eaten up. She didn't know whether she would be able to hold on to the house or not. Boots figured wittily, wildly on the back of an envelope. She could leave Francis come out here. Thirty-five dollars a week was not a great deal, with commutation and lunches taken out, but the residue would help.

"How much do we owe, exactly?" Her mother looked at her with surprise. This was a new daughter, resourceful, businesslike. She went to her desk. The taxes were paid, she explained, but there was a coal bill. She had run up accounts at the Fernwood Market. She just couldn't help it.

Boots felt a constriction of the throat. All this time she had felt so carefree and so resourceful, on her own in New York. Back here they had been actually struggling for their lives.

Well, things would be different now. She would throw herself valiantly into this new adventure. She would be the man of the house. Oh, if only she were clever, were older! These parents of hers were in a sense her very children now. She had them in her charge. If only she were rich!

The thought flashed across her mind with lightning quickness. Edward! She had been staying him off, fighting for time, not wishing to come to any decision.

"What did you say, Mother?" Mrs. Raeburn was weeping openly, frankly. "It's a shame . . . girl your age . . . ought not to have the responsibility."

Boots straightened her shoulders. She had failed them before, had hurt their pride. Now she was going to make amends. Edward or no Edward, she would see them through.

Sheriffs Advocate 4-Year-Term Bill

County Officials' Lobbies Get Into Action at Little Rock

LITTLE ROCK—Two groups of county officials met in Little Rock Thursday to discuss plans to obtain additional favors, directly and indirectly, from the voters.

About 30 members of the Arkansas Sheriffs' Association met to complete arrangements to support the proposed constitutional amendment which will extend to four years the length of terms of state and county officers.

A group of assessors also held an executive session and it was reported they are laying plans to sponsor a movement to have the state resume payment of 50 per cent of the assessors' salaries. The last legislature reduced the state's payment on the salaries to 25 per cent.

It was reported that the sheriffs, whose efforts largely were responsible in obtaining the signatures necessary to qualify the proposed amendment for the ballot in the November general election, will do nothing until after the meeting of the state Board of Election Commissioners, October 2.

The sheriffs will direct a campaign to obtain approval of the measure, but they are interested in the appointments of the county boards of election commissioners and will bide their time until they can obtain the names of the appointees it was said.

The campaign probably will be directed from headquarters to be established in Little Rock, and other groups of county officials will be invited to join in the effort to increase the terms of office.

Home Clubs

The Guernsey Home Demonstration club met at the home of Mrs. Sam Aylett August 28 at 2:30.

After an open discussion of the home demonstration council meeting to be held at Washington and the annual meeting of the Arkansas council of demonstration clubs at Camp Pike the hostess served ice cream and cake.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Will Anderson.

By HARRY GRAYSON

Connie Mack does not believe the race is over in either major league—not by a cat's paw.

Neither do the Yankees or Cardinals.

"I don't know what would have happened to the Detroit club had we taken the final game of our series at Navin Field," says Mack, the venerable field manager of the AAAA's. "And in that one Tommy Bridges beat Sugar Cane, who allowed only two singles—by Greenberg and Gehrig."

This game, by the way, set a new low hitting total for the Tigers, and was the first they won from us in four.

Mack doesn't say so, but from his conversation one gathers that he's in accord with many baseball men who have the idea that the Detroit outfit might now have real cause for apprehension were the Yankees not without the invaluable services of Catcher Bill Dickey and the superb outfielder, Earl Crenshaw.

The Tigers and the Giants now hold what might be considered comfortable leads with only 15 games remaining, yet both have shown unmistakable signs of cracking in the home stretch. Naturally, these slip-ups have rekindled the hopes of the Yankees and the Cardinals, each of which deserves much credit for hanging on well and fighting back in the face of disheartening adversity.

The Tigers and the Giants have been extremely fortunate in being able to present solid fronts all the way along the route—the former the luckier in that regard.

Detroit has gone along without one serious injury happily for the Tigers in a season where the loss of any one of five key men, Cochrane, Gehrig, Goslin, Greenberg or Owen, for any length of time, might have proved fatal.

The quietest sticking in there is the reason the club has performed the uncommon feat of drawing almost without a hitch the pennant without a single slip-up.

The Giants have experienced what bordered on a let down on two or three occasions, but each time there was the arm of Hubert of Schumacher or the shillabill of Bill Terry, Mel Ott, or Joe Moore to yank them out of the doldrums.

Their severest blow was the large LeRoy Parmelee's appendectomy, but Joe Bowman filled in nicely, and the Michigan farm boy returned with his slider as slick as ever.

Lefty O'Doul's sharp batting eye spelled Mooney's nicely while the Gauss Ghost cursed an ailing arm. Phil Wierzbowski increased the clubs momentum at the head of the stretch run, and Terry describes Hank Leiber as one of the finest flycatching prospects he has ever seen.

Four games between the leaders may as well tell the stories. The Cards are now having it out with the Giants at the Polo grounds for the last time, and the Yankees move into Detroit to do it the September 17.

With their Dean trouble behind, and with constant pitching for a change, the Cards appear the more formidable of the quartette. And, inspired by Gomez and Gehrig, the tenacious Yankees may yet spoil Frank J. Navin's World Series plans.

The Yankees and the Cardinals have herded their share of obstacles in the way of injuries, discord and slump. None gives by the Tigers and Giants are long over.

Words of Kindness
They are very easy, are
Words of kindness;
They cause one no worry or trouble to express.
And they smooth the brow of care,
Sooth the sad soul's fret,
And when they are said they leave
never a regret.
They cost nothing, and they are worth more than minted gold;
Gold is something that one's hands
for a time may hold.
They smooth paths for weary feet,
They uphold men's hands,
They make of life's rugged ways
Fair enchanted lands.
They buy more than gold can buy of the things men keep
And take with them to the bourne
Past the time of sleep,
Little words of kindness
Cost you not a thing,
But they put light in the sky,
Cause a soul to sing,
Smooth the rugged ways of life,
Start them running true,
And you cannot keep them from coming back to you.—Selected.

I OFTEN rented out my heart
When it was bright and new.
A day was all I would allow,
And tall lads, two and two,

MOVED in and out, and out and in.
(The neighbors frowned on me)
So easily I rented love,
I thought 'I would allow, be

EXTORTION, FORMAL

Hauptmann's arrest.
He spoke for the combined force of investigators that apprehended the alien—federal agents, New Jersey troopers and New York City police.

"In your opinion," O'Ryan was asked, "does this solve the Lindbergh kidnapping?"

Solution Declared Found.
O'Ryan conferred for a minute with J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation of the Department of Justice, and with H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the New Jersey state police.

He said:
"Yes, it will."

Story of Arrest
NEW YORK (AP)—Here is how the arrest in the Lindbergh kidnapping case was made:

As he had been expected from the time the kidnapping investigation bogged down in a hopeless mire of conflicting clues, the break in the relentless search came through a fluke.

Shortly after 10 a.m. last Saturday, a man in a Dodge sedan stopped at the Warner Quinlan gas station at 2115 Lexington avenue and ordered five gallons of gas.

He offered in payment a $10 gold certificate.

"You don't see many of these any more," remarked the manager, Walter Lyle, 35.

squad acting under Lieut. James Finn who has been assigned to the Lindbergh case since the day of the abduction, immediately began to trail the inconspicuous Bronx householder.

Becomes Suspicious
For several days Hauptmann's actions gave little indication that he might be the man for whom the entire world has been searching for two and one half years. Then, early on Thursday morning, he apparently became suspicious that he was being followed and police feared he might attempt to flee.

They broke into his home at once, placing him under arrest and taking him to the Greenwich police station, where the under-cover squad had its headquarters.

For more than 24 hours the prisoner was questioned by Inspector Lyons, Lieutenant Finn and other police officials. Speaking volubly with a broad German accent, Hauptmann persisted in his denials that he knew anything of the Lindbergh kidnapping or the ransom money.

The $10 with which he paid for the gasoline, he said, was acquired in the course of a business transaction, and he did not know its exact origin.

Meanwhile, however, a squad of detectives had been assigned to ransack the Hauptmann home. After they had searched every nook of the dwelling they began an inspection of the garage in the rear, which boasted of a newly-laid concrete floor.

Found Under Floor
They broke this and found under it the two tell-tale bundles of yellow and green bills that "Japsie" has passed to "Kidnaper John" through the walls of St. Raymond's cemetery.

The Hauptmann home is on the top floor of a two-story Bronx house at the northwest corner of Needham avenue and one block west of the Boston Port Road. The family occupies five rooms there. On the ground floor is an apartment in which Max Rauch dwells with his aged mother, who was the only person in the building Thursday afternoon.

The garage is a frame building, 11 by 15 feet. Federal men had completely demolished the floor and had dug deep holes in the ground beneath by the time reporters were permitted to examine the interior.

While the search of the home was going on on the fourth floor room at the Greenwich street station where Hauptmann was being questioned was rapidly filling with the highest police and Department of Justice officials.

Relentless in Grilling
J. Edgar Hoover, head of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice; Frank Fay, head of the New York district for the department; Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the New Jersey state police who was in charge of the original kidnap hunt; Police Commissioner O'Ryan and others crowded into the narrow confines to be in at the break. Relentlessly the questioning went on and just as desperately the prisoner kept his denials of any implication in the entire Lindbergh affair.

Before confronting Hauptmann with the discovery of the ransom money in his garage, the inquisitors tried one more move to break him down.

John Perrone, a taxi driver, was brought into the station house. It was he, who on March 12, 1932—two days after Japsie had advertised himself as a possible negotiator—was stopped by a pedestrian and offered $1 to deliver a note to the aged educator's home.

Hauptmann was put in line with several other prisoners and Perrone was led into the room.

"Pick out the man who handed you that note," directed Inspector Lyons.

Identified by Taxi Driver
Without a moment's hesitation, the taxi driver stepped in front of Hauptmann and tapped him on the shoulder.

"This is the one," he said.

"Don't you believe him," Haupt-

mann burst out. Then turning to Perrone, he snarled:

"Damn you, you're not telling the truth."

Mrs. Joe Colemand, Mrs. George Green, second grade.
Mrs. Fred Russell, Miss Genevieve Dodds, third grade.
Mrs. C. O. Higgins, Miss Helen McRae, fourth grade.
Mrs. C. V. Nunn, Miss Nellie Porter, fifth grade.
Mrs. C. B. Presley, Mrs. Charles Routon, Jr., sixth grade.

mann burst out. Then turning to Perrone, he snarled:

"Damn you, you're not telling the truth."

Cardinals Win 2; Pull Up on Giants

St. Louis Gains Half a Game on National League Leaders

BOSTON, Mass. (AP)—The Cardinals continued their pennant drive with a double victory over the Braves 4 to 1 and 1 to 0 today, as the clubs closed out their season's rivalry. The two triumphs put the Cards a half game closer to the Giants, leaving them 3½ games behind the league leaders.

Excellent pitching by Tex Carleton and Bill Walker carried the Cards over today's difficulties. Carleton limited the Braves to three hits in the opener to beat them for the sixth time this season and Walker came through with a shutout although touches for eight blows, one more than the Cards made off Fren Frankhouse.

Ed Brant's wildness proved costly to the Braves in the first clash.

According to records for the last half century, August 31 has been the wettest day of the year in England.

Clergy Refuse to Aid Long Crusade

"Kingfish" Angered, Calls Them "Cowards"—"Drunkard" Is Reply

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP)—Huey P. Long struck a storm of ministerial criticism Thursday in his campaign against purported gambling and vice.

Very Much Improved After Taking Cardui

"I have suffered a great deal from cramping," writes Mrs. W. A. Sewell, Sr., of Waco, Texas. "I would chill and have to go to bed for about three days at a time. I would have a dull, tired, sleepy feeling. A friend told me to try Cardui, thinking it would help me—and it did. I am very much improved and do not spend the time in bed. I certainly can recommend Cardui to other sufferers."

Thousands of women testify Cardui benefited them. If it does not benefit you, consult a physician.

in New Orleans, and then set out to find a larger slice of statewide proportions to conduct his crusade. Questioning the Louisiana dictator's sincerity in his personally-supervised moral reform movement, 27 Protestant ministers refused to join his cleanup campaign here.

In a stormy interlude, Long was quoted by ministers as calling them "cowards" and exclaiming: "You ministers never have done anything and I don't expect you to do anything now."

One minister present told the gathering, he "resented" Long's hurried departure, and added: "When the city of New Orleans is cleaned up it will not be cleaned up by a drunkard."

Senator Long, accompanied by his bodyguards, walked into the ministers' meeting here at about the same time Governor O. K. Allen in Baton Rouge was sending a letter to Mayor V. V. Lomkin and Police Chief C. C. O'Malley of Alexandria, ordering them to stamp out alleged gambling dives and vice or face "possible arrest and prosecution."

Mayor Lomkin heard the news and laconically remarked: "I'm on the job 24 hours a day and I am attending to the city's business."

The New Orleans anti-dive discussion wound up in an uproar and the "kingfish" floundered, telling newspapermen locked outside that "nothing happened, we just had a meeting."

The Rev. S. Grandbell Posey, Baptist minister and son of Senator Long's personal minister, was more elaborate however.

He said the ministers refused to adopt a resolution prepared before the meeting pledging their support of Long's vice crusade, and that the senator charged that the ministers "hid behind their churches and kept an eye on their pay checks."

Walter M. Barrett, Jr., representing Mayor T. Semmes Walmisley, was applauded when he tendered the mayor's support of any movement they might wish to initiate.

The meeting, a sequel to the one called several weeks ago by Governor Allen, was conducted on similar lines. The press was barred.

The Rev. Mr. Posey told the gathering after Long had left that the senator "never had any respect for the ministers."

"I have heard Senator Long in the most profane language say that my father was the only honest preacher he knew," he exclaimed.

4 CENTS POUND

Stanley, county agent, announced Friday. The sale price has been set at 4 cents per pound.

"This plan in handling the excess cotton," says Mr. Stanley, "does not mean that the government will purchase such certificates but does mean that those who have more cotton than they have cotton to gin and sell may turn the excess certificates over to the manager of the national surplus cotton tax-exemption certificate pool who will handle them for the producers under a trust agreement."

The price of 4 cents a pound is approximately 70 per cent of the tax of 5.67 cents per pound imposed by the Bankhead act on the ginning of cotton. Under the pool provisions, farmers who do not gin cotton may sell certificates to the pool. The pool will then gin the cotton and sell it at a profit. The pool will also include provision for local sales of tax-exempt certificates in a county at the same price by individual farmers provided the sales are made through the office of the assistant in cotton adjustment in the county in which the certificates sold were distributed.

you will be taken care of."

"Keep your mouth shut," Alagna said that Stanley R. Wright, Ward Line representative, told him, "Don't say anything to anyone. Come to my office and this thing will blow over."

The alleged conversation took place on board the Coast Guard cutter Tampa after the last remaining officers and members of the crew had been taken off the burning liner, Alagna told Dickerson N. Hoover, federal steamship inspector in charge of the investigation.

After the cutter landed, Alagna said, he was driven to Wright's office where he asked for funds to go home to Connecticut. He was told, he testified, that he would be taken care of later.

Alagna declared, however, that he was offered $10 and access to Wright's personal account and downtown clothing accounts.

Earlier Alagna told in detail of his efforts to get Acting Captain W. F. Wams to send out a S.O.S.

Five trips and strong pleadings were necessary, Alagna testified, before Capt. Wams gave out the order to send the S.O.S. at about 3:25. Alagna said that by this time flames were so high and smoke so dense that he passed the radio room and did not realize until he was faced with a wall of flame.

Because of weakened digestive organs, old people need a thorough laxative, but a gentle one. Delicious Feen-a-mint, the chewing gum laxative distributes the laxative ingredient by chewing, uniformly into the system, thus giving "full" complete action that is more natural and gentle. Doctors regularly prescribe the laxative ingredient in delicious Feen-a-mint. Delay is dangerous, so today safely get back on schedule and stay there. Chew non-habit forming Feen-a-mint for constipation.

"What will we have to go with it?"

IT'S comparatively simple to choose the meat dish for a meal. Roast beef, baked ham, chops, or chicken are always welcome. But what should be served with the meat to prevent monotony—that's the question.

Of course you can turn to the cook-books for suggestions. For other timely ideas—food suggestions that are in season and within your price range—turn to the pages of your daily newspaper. There you will find tasty, colorful fresh vegetables and fruits displayed; appetizing variety in canned and packaged foods; delicious desserts that are easy to make; crispy, healthful breakfast cereals, beverages that are appropriate for both young and old.

As a matter of fact you'll be pleasantly surprised at the variety of foods offered in this newspaper. By reading the advertisements before you shop, you will be better able to plan interesting meals.

Weekly Sunday School Lesson

Text: Isaiah 31:1-9; 37:36-37.
The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for September 23.

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

If there ever was a time when a lesson on recognizing God in national affairs was appropriate and necessary, surely it would be a time such as this in present-day America.

Within recent years we have seen the collapse of a prosperity that had started questioning among all thinking men concerning the very foundations of our society as well as the quality of the building that we have been doing upon the foundations.

In the main, among thinking men, there is no great doubt concerning the foundations and the principles of our American democracy, but there is some question whether, under the pressure of new forces and new problems, emergencies exist that call for a rougher and readier method.

It is appalling to realize the number of men and women, who a few years ago would have laid all the stress upon the foundations and principles, who are today advocating measures and courses that are out of harmony with the deepest and most essential teachings of democracy.

What has a lesson like this to say to us in our crisis? We cannot easily put ourselves back into the ancient world when Israel was a buffer state in the midst of great contending empires, or if we do so it can be only in a very general way without getting the details of foreign problems and foreign policy in a remote state and time.

We can, however, put ourselves into the prophetic atmosphere and catch something of the moral outlook and the moral principles that influenced a hero-patriot as he saw his country in the midst of peril, from within and from without.

Israel was always, in a sense, in a condition of peril. The little land of Palestine, much smaller than our states and little larger than some of our counties, lay, generation after generation, at the center of contending empires, somewhat like Belgium in modern times.

The tendency in Israel was for some king or party to look for strength and safety in an alliance with one of these great empires. At the moment there were those who looked to Egypt for help against the power of Assyria.

In these repeated crises the attitude and messages of the prophets of Israel were fairly consistent. In the main they emphatically declared that the only way to be the sensible, practical fact, that the safety and welfare of the country lay rather in a high-minded and honest neutrality, with a concern on the part of the people for the integrity of their own personal and social living and a devotion to the high things to which God had called them.

It was this message that, even after downfall and captivity in Babylon, gave to Israel a new restoration and a new destiny. It is this prophetic vision of Israel's place and power in the world that has always been linked with the highest and greatest witness of the Jews.

Here, in this particular instance, Isaiah warns his people against the prospective alliance with Egypt. He knew that Egypt was playing its own selfish game, and he warned them that, instead of giving protection and deliverance, Egypt would take their rich presents and exploit them for its own ambition.

Deep in his message was the emphasis upon spiritual, rather than material, forces. "The Egyptians are men and not God; their horses flesh and not spirit."

It was not a teaching easy to apprehend or to follow. It always seems so much easier and simpler to trust to material forces than to look to the spiritual foundations. Moreover, the losses and sacrifices incurred through spiritual faith and devotion seem needless and useless, although in reality the tragedy and destruction associated with materialism are much greater.

It requires faith and vision to see that, out of spiritual loss, there may be real gain; yet history reveals nothing with such assurance as that right principles and right conduct are the only sure foundation for a nation's life and safety.

12c GOVERNMENT COTTON LOAN FORMS RECEIVED

Forms for effecting government 12-cent loans are here, and we are now prepared to arrange loans with the same prompt and careful consideration that we have extended the producer for over 30 years.

The evidence of this constructive and gratifying service is the retention of the valuable patronage of some of the largest and most influential planters in the Hope territory for that unusual length of time; and those who anticipate placing their cotton in 12-cent government loans can be assured of this most satisfactory attention. Furthermore, they will find it to their decided advantage to arrange their loans through our firm.

Respectfully,

E. C. BROWN & CO.
